NATIONAL CAFFEINE AWARENESS MONTH

National Caffeine Awareness Month is observed to help individuals increase their awareness of how much caffeine they are consuming each day and identify ways to reduce their intake. Caffeine is a bitter tasting compound that is found naturally in various plants and acts as a stimulant of the central nervous system. For many, caffeine is typically included with their early morning coffee or mid-day teas, aiming to help individuals stay awake, focused, and reduce tiredness.

Identifying what sources of caffeine you typically have in a day is a great way to make changes in the amounts you consume.

A few additional ways you can observe National Caffeine Awareness Month include:

- Track your caffeine intake to identify what sources to reduce in your daily routine.
- Try a brisk walk or morning exercise to give you that much needed boost of energy.
- Aim to drink more water and switch out caffeinated beverages, when possible.
- Reduce caffeinated beverages gradually to reduce potential symptoms of withdrawal.

Remember, while caffeine is a great option for energy there are other ways that we can get a similar boost while also maintaining our health and hydration!

Soul Care For Seniors

“Soul care” means caring for our deep inner self, the thoughts and feelings we often keep to ourselves. “Soul” does not refer to religious beliefs, but to a deep connection to life and ourselves. Our mental, emotional, and physical health suffers when we lose that connection while caring for others or being busy with projects and responsibilities.

Mindful acceptance, or mindfulness, offers a way to enjoy our lives more and reduce stress through simple daily practices. Following the breath is an easy way to shift out of auto pilot anytime we notice unwanted thoughts, feelings, or even physical pain. The breath is always with us, which makes this a convenient tool for reconnecting with ourselves. This exercise is quite simple and involves following the breath with an easy, relaxed awareness.

Try this simple exercise: “Breathing in, I calm myself; breathing out, I smile.”
